RUSSIAN TROOPS INVADE FINLAND

Soviet Forces Meet Stubborn Resistance from Gallant Finnish Defenders; Tiny Baltic State Appeals to League of Nations

Finnish and Russian air forces met in battle on Tuesday and the result was a decisive victory for the Finns. A semi-official dispatch from Sweden states that Finnish airplanes have carried out a raid on the Soviet Arctic port of Murmansk, during which no less than 60 Russian planes were destroyed. Other reports, unconfirmed, state that huge fires are blazing in several important Russian cities.

Diplomatic tension between Russia and Finland, agitated and incited for the past several weeks by the Russian press, flared into open warfare on Sunday last, when Soviet troops swarmed into the little Baltic state of Finland, accompanied by air raids, mass parachute formations and naval forces.

A last minute attempt to halt the hostilities by removal of the government ministers opposed to Russia and formation of a new government, failed as Russia made plain her determination to secure control of vital naval bases in Finland and also sought control of the Canadian-owned nickel mines in that country. Finland's tiny army, hopelessly outnumbered but supplied with Italian fighting equipment, rushed to the defence of its country and at last reports was offering stubborn resistance to the invaders and was prepared to destroy the valuable mines rather than see them fall into the hands of their opponents. Reports indicated that in several sectors the Russians had been repulsed but the overwhelming numbers of available Soviet troops leave little doubt of the ultimate outcome.

Mass descents by parachutes of specially trained Russian troops have not been altogether successful, the parachutes making an excellent target for gunfire and, in addition, many of the attackers being destroyed before they could organize for defence following their descent.

Meanwhile air raids on Finnish cities and towns continue to exact a heavy toll of casualties, as well as wrecking many important buildings in the Finnish centres. One Russian raiding squadron, however, was reported to have been lost in a blinding snowstorm and to have crashed in a wooded sector of Finland.

Immediately on the outbreak of war Finland appealed to the League of Nations, claiming unwarranted aggression by the Soviet, and the League has been summoned to meet in Geneva next Saturday to consider the matter.

Sweden, alarmed by the trend of affairs, has ordered mobilization of her forces, bringing her army from a nominal strength of 20,000 to nearly 150,000 men.

Argentina and Uruguay are reported planning to ask expulsion of Russia from the League of Nations because of her invasion of Poland, and a still more recent despatch from Washington indicates that the U.S.A. is willing to join wholeheartedly in any condemnation of the Russian action.

From Sweden come reports that the Scandinavian countries are likely to join in an attempt to arbitrate the Russo-Finnish dispute, while in Rome anti-Soviet demonstrations increased and police and soldiers were called out to guard the Russian embassy against infuriated demonstrators.

Welcome news comes from Great Britain to the effect that admiralty experts have worked out a means of combatting the new magnetic mines and that the secret process is working satisfactorily. Confirmation of this report is seen in the fact that shipping losses caused by mines have decreased sharply during the past week.

With the exception of sporadic artillery activity on the western front, the war on land continues on much the same lines as for the past several weeks. As this is written (Tuesday) His Majesty King George, is engaged in a tour of the British positions in France and, accompanied by Viscount Gort, British commander-in-chief, has been inspecting tank traps, machine gun emplacements and other positions held by the British forces.

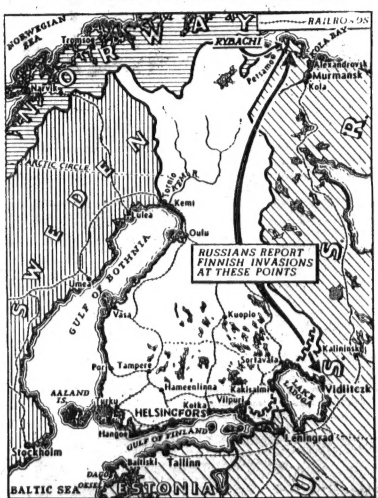

On Sunday last R.A.F. planes flew over a daring raid on the German naval base at Heligoland and the raiders reported having damaged three Nazi war vessels during the attack. One British plane was hit by anti-aircraft fire but all returned safely to their base after the attack.

An interesting sidelight on Canada's war effort comes from Callender, Ontario, with the announcement that the famous Dionne Quintuplets will donate $1,000 to the work of the Red Cross.

B.C. Evangelist To Speak Here

Coming to Wainwright—Evangelist Wm. Deverill, of Vancouver, who has been engaged in the ministry for the past 16 years, is commencing special meetings in Wainwright and vicinity. The first meeting will be on Sunday, December 10th, in the Masonic Hall. Mr. Deverill will also be accompanied by Mrs. Deverill and Mr. F. Hartley, who will assist in music and singing.

Where Russo-Finnish Conflict Flared

The map, above, shows where the Russo-Finnish dispute has now flared into open warfare, with the Finnish army of 400,000 putting up a gallant fight against the invasion of 1,000,000 Soviet troops. Canadian interests jeopardized by the invasion are those of the International Nickel Company of Canada, which has considerable property in Finland. Latest reports state that the Finns are determined to set fire to the invaders or blow them up, rather than have them fall into Russian hands.

Governor-General Takes Personal Interest in Tank Corps

Flying from Ottawa, Lord Tweedsmuir paid an inspection visit to Camp Borden and is shown, right, stepping from the plane which flew him from the Dominion's capital. His Excellency was an interested spectator as units of the Tank Corps, in which his son, Hon. Alasdair Buchanan, serves as a lieutenant

Col. F. F. Worthington, head of the Armored Fighting Vehicles School and O.C. of the Tank Corps.

Basketball Teams Play at Vermilion

Saturday last again saw the Wainwright Basketball teams journeying over to Vermilion to play basketball. The girls' team played against the Vermilion Junior Men's team. Our girls got away to rather a slow start and the end of the first half saw the score reading 15-6, with Wainwright on the short end. However, right from the start of the second half the girls began to show more fire and speed and things began to look up. With but a few seconds to go the score read 20-19 in our favor, but in the last seconds one of the boys broke away and at the final goal the score read Vermilion 21, Wainwright 20. It was a fine game and credit is due the Vermilion boys for the fine spirit in which they played, and the restraint they practised in the matter of bumping and roughing it up.

The second game between the men's teams was a slam-bang affair, with Wainwright on the long end of a 52-24 score.

During the evening the teams were guests at the dance.

Canada Will Go To Polls in May

Ottawa.—Canada's next general elections will be held in May, with the polling date set for less than thirty days after the issuance of the election writs, it was learned here today.

The reason for the cutting down of the time between the issuance of the writs and the actual polling day is the desirability of causing the minimum of disruption which all general elections have on the country, especially now that Canada's war effort is speeding up and all Canadian industry is swinging into wartime production on a large scale.

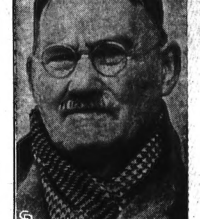

The usual time between the issuing of writs and the actual elections is about two months, but in view of the emergency situation now existing it is thought that this would place too great a strain on Canadian business at a time when every moment counts.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has announced on more than one occasion that he is averse to extending the life of parliament, even in a war emergency. He is equally opposed to the formation of a union government composed of all parties. Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, national Conservative leader, is understood to be sympathetic to the government's War Time Elections Act, which will be brought down to enable the polling date to be fixed within thirty days of the issuance of the writs. Hon. Dr. Manion recently made a tour across Canada, consulting with his organization in each province, and took particular pains to avoid public meetings.

However, it is known that he advised his organizers and followers to be prepared for a quick election in May.

The last session of the present parliament will be called in January and it is expected that it will deal exclusively with matters pertaining to Canada's war efforts and the passing of the necessary legislation dealing with the War Time Elections Act and its provisions and regulations. Following this close the appeal to the country will be made with as little delay as possible, and certainly within 30 days of the issuance of the writs.

Dead

"Father of basketball," Dr. James Nalsmith, above, professor emeritus of physical education at Kansas University, died at his home at Lawrence, Kansas, following a lengthy spell of ill-health. Dr. Nalsmith, who started the great indoor winter pastime by having his students throw footballs into peach baskets, was born in Ontario.

Melodrama Portrays Munitions War

An up-to-date melodrama, "Four Men and a Prayer," portrays four sons intent on avenging the murder of their father, each hither and yon about the globe, getting into and out of a South American revolution and countless lesser brushes and brawls before unmasking the munitions manufacturer responsible for it all and expounding the principle that if there were no guns there would be no shooting. The picture is lively as a cricket, as lethal as a Tommy gun, and contains enough billable names for half a dozen run-of-mill shot and shell shockers.

The story stems from a book by David Garth and the outcome is a handsomely upholstered and well spoken adventure tale with no holds barred and the wide world no farther away than the next subtitle.

Loretta Young plays a reckless young woman in love with one of the four sons of a British army officer dishonorably discharged and then murdered. The boys set out to prove their father's innocence. The trail leads them, and the girl, to South America, India, Africa and other exciting places before they discover that the girl's father is president of a munitions company which melted an Indian revolt fallaciously imploring the deceased.

The love interest in this week end picture is minor. British family traditions are impressively registered in the opening sequences.

B.C. Session Ends After Five Weeks

Victoria.—Third session of British Columbia's 19th legislature prorogued Thursday after a five-week session, one of the shortest on record.

Heated debate and budget debates featured the session in which 67 bills, few of which were considered major measures, were adopted. Lieutenant-Governor E. W. Hamber performed the closing ceremonies, giving assent to a number of bills.

Black and Orange 1940 Car Licenses

Color scheme of Alberta automobile license plates for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1940, will be orange figures on a black background. It was announced Wednesday by Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial secretary.

Announcement also was made that January 10 will be the cut-off date for acceptance by the government of applications for a 20 per cent rebate on the current year's license plates turned in by car owners laying up cars for the winter.

Motorists Escape Serious Injury

Miss Elsie Martin and her brother Mr. Johnson Martin had a narrow escape from serious injury on the highway east of town last week during a sleet and snow storm.

They had stopped the car on the right side of the road and Miss Martin was attempting to clear the snow from the windshield. A car coming from the west ran head-on into them, knocking Miss Martin into the ditch and doing considerable damage to both cars.

Fortunately neither Miss Martin nor the other occupants of the cars were badly hurt.

Mr. Tom Herbert was a tonsillitis patient at the hospital during the week.

Young Man Dies At Local Hospital

There passed away in the local hospital on Saturday evening last, Cecil Ralph Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Johnson, of Ribstone, at the age of 26 years.

Deceased, who had been in poor health for some time, took suddenly worse and was brought to hospital on Saturday afternoon, but despite the best medical attention, failed to rally and passed away as stated above.

He leaves to mourn besides his sorrowing parents, 3 sisters (Mrs. Dave Gardner and Mrs. Chas. Mallard both being well-known here) and one brother Rawleigh.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon from the Lutheran church at Ribstone, with McLeod's Funeral Parlors in charge.

His Majesty Visits Troops in France

The King has arrived in France on a visit to the troops. It has been announced officially. The King landed in France from a British destroyer.

The King was accompanied by his brother, Major-General the Duke of Gloucester, who is chief liaison officer to Viscount Gort, Britain's commander-in-chief in France.

The communique said the King "intends to make a personal tour of the troops in France during his stay in that country," but did not give the intended length of his visit.

George VI Bereaved Princess Louise Dies

Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, great aunt of the King and widow of a former Governor-General of Canada, died on Sunday last at her home in Kensington Palace, London. She was 91 years of age.

The Princess after whom the Province of Alberta was named, was the oldest of the three survivors of Queen Victoria's family. She is survived by her brother, the 89-year-old Duke of Connaught, former Governor-General of Canada, and the 82-year-old Princess Beatrice, widow of Prince Henry of Battenberg and mother of former Queen Victoria of Spain.

Princess Louise had been in ill-health for a long time, living in seclusion in London.

In 1882 the Marquess of Lorne, then governor-general of Canada, named the newly-formed North-West Territory, which was to become the province of Alberta in 1905, in honor of his wife, Princess Louise, whose full Christian name was Princess Louise Caroline Alberta, Duchess of Argyll.

Princess Louise accompanied her husband to Canada in 1878 when he was named governor-general of the Dominion. She resided with him at Government House in Ottawa until 1883, when his term of office expired. The Marquess of Lorne's decision to name the province after his wife followed a trip which he made throughout the West during the previous year.

Mr. Bill Dalton, who has been employed at the Safeway Store in town for the past several weeks, left at the week end for Camrose, to which point he was transferred.

Memories of a Prairie Lake . . .

(By Mrs. Gregory, of Rosedale, B.C., in the Chilliwack Progress)

After reading "Wandering with Dom" in The Progress, my own mind began to wander back to my early acquaintance with Clear Lake.

In the Indian summer of 1906 a rider from the only other ranch in the whole district (situated seven miles from us, and our only neighbor) told me of a patch of black currants at the east end of Ribstone Lake, so with my horse and dog and a small lunch, I set off one morning to locate the much prized black currants, visions of jam and jelly made of this pungent berry in mind. There were no roads whatever, and only some times did the cattle trails (usually following the old cattle trails) ever go in the direction one wished to go.

My friendly direction was "go about 10 miles north and four east and you will see Clear Lake if you ride to the top of that little ridge of hills." As there were no fences in the whole country, I had little trouble finding the clump of currants. With my pail filled, in the late afternoon I decided to see Clear Lake, and rode to the top of the little ridge of hills. I have not forgotten the sight of that beautiful lake, evidently made by an earthquake, so deep, so clear, fairly sparkling in the glow of sunset; deep square banks along the north side; trees and scrub near the water's edge; even a pebbly shore of white sand. The average prairie lake was more on a level with the surrounding country, with bog and hummocks to the water no shore or beach. High bare hills surrounded Clear Lake and far on the shaded side, hundreds of wild ducks settled in coveys. A loon let go his wild night cry, often likened to the maniacal laugh of one demented.

I rode down and let my horse stand knee deep to drink, throwing myself on the white sand to drink my fill of the pure cold water and then set off on a long lunge home.

I have every reason to believe I was the first white woman to look upon Clear Lake.

We were then about 120 miles from town or railway, but two years later a survey party came in and began running lines for the Grand Trunk Railway. Construction started a year later. Camps, known by the number of the section on which they were located, sprang up; a bridge was built across Ribstone Creek. The day the work train first crossed over it, I rode over to see it. I took along a pail and rode over to nearby Ribstone Lake to gather the black currants. As the engine rattled and snorted along, back and forth on the new laid tracks, a large flock of Canadian wild geese arose in flight from the shadows and stretching their long, white-ringed necks, called out in protest against the disturbance of civilization.

I, too, felt that it was all over, that never again would I be out of hearing of railways and man-made noises, and like the wild geese, like the stolid redskin must have felt, I rode slowly away, in deep thought of an Eden spoiled.

Settlement came, covered wagons and hayracks loaded with implements and furniture appeared. The stuff remained outside in the weather until a shack of logs or sod was put up. Later on a post office was built, just over the hill from Clear Lake, and called "Heath". Another on section 14 is now "Greenhills". As grades were built, Wainwright, first called Denwood, was begun. Later it was moved bodily with horses and capstans, two miles to its present site, where it has grown into a splendid city, famous for its oil wells, its terrible fire in 1929, its buffalo herds and its splendid grain crops.

Dear Sir,—What are we fighting for? That is the question uppermost in the minds of our young people today. True, we are fighting against aggression and desire for world domination by a man crazed by and for power. Twenty-five years ago we began a war to end all wars and to preserve democracy, at the conclusion of which a peace was signed based on hatred, wherein lay the foundation for a future war, the one beginning in 1939, ending no one knows when.

Demands for the war aims of the Allies to be made public are increasing in England, and we feel the same should be made here. If the sole aim is the defeating of Hitler, then reverting back to poverty, distress and unemployment, in a world that produces so abundantly then the longer the war lasts the better. However, if we are to create a new world, a new lasting, and provide a measure of security for the peoples of the world, we cannot see eye to eye with governments that prosecute anyone found guilty of talking peace, or declaring that war does not serve in the interests of humanity, while at the same time allowing such political patronage at the expense of the people as has been disclosed by MacLean's Magazine.

Nor do we believe that allowing Mr. G. McCullagh, of the Globe and Mail, to try and breed hatred of the German people is conducive to the best interests of a lasting peace when hostilities are over. Today, with the speed of travel, communication and education, we know that the people of this world are human, no matter what their race, creed or religion, and all they ask is an opportunity to live, to found and maintain a home by being allowed a fair share of the world's goods. We believe that if a definite assurance of this opportunity be given the peoples of the world by their respective governments, that peace could be assured at an early date. Again the question: What are we fighting for?

Beauty for YOU

The Secrets of Good Looks by Barbara Lynn

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Superfluous hair is a bothersome affliction to many girls and women. It is particularly noticeable at this time of the year because the warm summer weather often accentuates the hair growth. Don't make the mistake of shaving hairs from your face. It is only advisable for removing the underarm growth. If you have a growth on your face, try this mild bleaching treatment: Mix three tablespoons of peroxide with six drops of ammonia. If the skin is very tender, add another tablespoon of peroxide to weaken the bleach. Apply with a clean piece of absorbent cotton, and allow the liquid to dry on the face.

For hairs on arms and face, pour six tablespoons of peroxide into a cup then beat in half a tablespoon of ammonia. If the hairs are extremely dark and coarse, use a stronger mixture by mixing two parts of peroxide to one part of ammonia. Do NOT use this treatment on the face!

Are you afraid that creams and soaps encourage superfluous hair? To make sure that this doesn't happen to you, always wash with gentle palmolive soap, and use the delightful new three-purpose cream for your skin. You can be confident that your beautifying efforts won't cause hair to grow on the face.

You can obtain a copy of my new booklet on Beauty Care which is full of helpful beauty hints, by sending four one-cent stamps. Ask about your personal beauty problems, too. Address: Miss Barbara Lynn, Box 70, Station B, Montreal, Que.

54 Deaths in Motor Accidents

Safety in driving on Alberta's highways has again been shown as a priority need in view of the increasing number of traffic fatalities in the province.

Reports received by officials of the Alberta Motor Association show that 54 deaths have occurred in this province so far this year, due to traffic accidents. Of those, eight occurred at level crossings while five were due to children playing on the streets.

Many pedestrians also were involved in these fatal accidents, due to "jay-walking" across the streets. In the cities, 10 had occurred in Edmonton and five in Calgary. There were no traffic deaths in other Alberta cities.

This growing death toll has aroused the citizens, particularly in Edmonton where there are insistent demands that the police strictly enforce the traffic regulations on speedsters and reckless drivers.

With driving hazards increased, owing to shorter daylight hours and more difficult road conditions on account of icy surfaces, motorists are being urged to exercise special care at this time.

As winter arrives, your children's needs again require attention. They need the winter enjoyment of skating which promotes health. They will therefore need their skates sharpened or repaired and this is best done at the O.K. Shoe Repair, where a good job is guaranteed.

THE SENSE OF TASTE

Man tastes with his tongue while some animals, for example fish, taste with the whole body. An infant tastes with the middle part of his tongue and an adult determines with the sides of his tongue whether food is pleasing or not.

Food is tasted by means of the taste buds, of which the cow has about 15,000, the antelope 50,000 and man about 3,000. The whale has very few taste buds and gulps its food so quickly that it does not bother about

The Family DOCTOR

Dr. JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D., F.R.C.P.

Overeating and Heart Disease

Living almost in the door of a great city, I naturally notice their vital statistics, and the prevailing causes of death as reported in the newspapers. Within the last seven days five sudden deaths have occurred, the victims ranging from fifty to sixty years of age. "Heart disease" was the newspaper report, doubtless based on the official death certificate.

It's the same old story. The business man arises from bed in the morning—probably retired at midnight or later—he hastily swallows a cup of coffee and a half-cooked dish of somebody's "health food." He is too busy to fool with a good breakfast; besides, the wife isn't up yet; it's only half-past eight.

He rushes downtown to the office, or the car-barn, garage, store or what-have-you. Customers are there waiting. He grinds till twelve-thirty; then the lunch-counter, a miserable excuse for a meal—it just isn't one. Back to the grind for the second session.

Six o'clock—he hurries home—ah, dinner! Beefsteak, fried potatoes, coffee, many condiments for stimulation; fritters, omelettes, gravies—a monster feed and plenty of time; it reassures the tired body and nerves. The desserts challenge the capacity of old King Cole.

The tummy dangles gets short-winded in time, but he looks so capable with his ample bay-window. He stimulates more—struggles on and on to the fatal fifty to sixty decade, shorter of breath, maybe gets elected to a seat in the city council—drops dead! Just heart disease; too bad. Is life of so little worth? I wish I could impress upon my neighbors the danger of the six o'clock dinner!

the taste. Amongst horned cattle, taste is important, and they scrupulously select the grasses they like.

We know four distinct tastes: Sweet, salty, bitter and sour. This sweet taste is perceived on the tongue the quickest, because the taste buds for sweets are located at the tip of the tongue; then comes salty and sour taste. Bitter tastes are tasted at the back of the tongue.

Taste can be regulated. Warm coffee requires less sugar than cold, because warmth is a stimulant to the taste buds. No matter how much sugar is added to ice cream it will not seem too sweet, because when cooled the taste buds scarcely function. If the tongue is rubbed with ice, one fails to perceive different tastes, a good proof in taking bitter drugs. Taste is a fine sense. It can be trained. Test tasters are able to tell the place of origin of a tea after a single tasting. Wine tasters can tell from where a certain variety of wine came and also whether the grapes from which it was made grew in a sunny or shady field.

WHY WEEDS ARE HARD TO KILL

Each weed has a life history of its own, and the reason why one is hard to kill may not be at all the chief reason why another perishes. Some of the principal reasons, however, are given by Herbert Groh, Division of Botany, Science Service, as follows:

1. They are naturally adapted for life in gardens, fields and the surroundings of men. They might be easy to kill, or would die out of themselves, if they happened to start growth in the dense shade of a woodland. For the same reason the plants of woodlands would be easy to kill, or hard to keep alive, in the unnatural environment (for them) of our fields and gardens. Most of our weeds have come from older lands where they have held their own against man for ages in just such an environment. Often the crops they grow with are less hardy and aggressive than they are, and can only survive and thrive as they are cared for by the farmer, while the weeds only need to be left alone to win out in the race for light, space, water and plant food.
2. An immense quantity of seed is produced by some weeds, especially by annuals and biennials, the resulting pollution of the soil requiring years of cleaning, even if no more plants are allowed to go to seed.
3. Many species have vigorous perennial root systems (thistles, dandelions, etc.) which renew growth until repeated destruction of the tops at every fresh appearance starves them.
4. Many weeds have ingenious adaptations as plumes, hook prickles, tumble weed form of growth, etc., for the wide dispersal of their seed.
5. Sometimes weeds persist for the simple reason that farmers will keep on re-seeding their land with crop seeds containing weed seeds, rather than pay a little more for pure seed.
6. Weeds may seem harder to kill than they really are, because we half-kill them, and then forget them until they have become troublesome again. "Eternal vigilance is the price of safety."
7. Weed control is sometimes rendered difficult because neighbors neglect to do their share, and the careful farmer suffers with the rest. Co-operation is needed.

growth of crops or native vegetation and to show on suitable maps the location and extent of the different soil types. States A. Lansey, Division of Field Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. The soil survey also includes the recognition of other factors, especially physical ones which influence the present or potential agricultural production of the surveyed area.

Since the agricultural production of any area is primarily dependent on the nature of the soils in that area, the information obtained by means of the soil survey has manifold uses. One of its most important functions is that its serves as a fundamental basis for classifying and systematizing the results of cropping, cultural and fertilizer experience and experiment. It is a well-known fact that soils vary tremendously in their power to produce crops and in their response to various cultural and fertilizer treatments imposed on them by men. Hence the experience gained on one type of soil may not necessarily apply to another type of soil even in the same district. It is only by means of the soil survey that the great body of information accumulated on crops and cropping practices can be utilized to best advantage.

Soil survey information can and has been used with marked success in directing settlement to the better soil utilization, in the planning of proper land use, in the direct solution of soil problems and in focusing attention on present or potential agricultural problems related to the soil. Lastly, but not least, the soil survey gives an inventory of the soil resources of the country, a knowledge which is of paramount importance from the national viewpoint.

The World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange,
Director, Research Department,
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

"The drought consumes us. There on high

The hills are parched, the streams are dry.
The drought consumes us. Still I strive,
And will not leave while I survive."
—(Chinese poem from the Shi King Collection of Confucius.)

That drought in the large wheat areas of the world is a common experience is revealed by this ancient Chinese poem, the author of which is unknown, but which was written certainly more than 2,000 years ago.

The farmers in the southern areas of our Prairie Provinces have suffered severely from a long series of bad drought years. Most of our farmers did not leave their land, but on the contrary they strived as long as they could survive, just as did the ancient Chinese farmer poet.

POOLS RUSH IN

I have never seen any statistics of the number of automobile fatalities that are due to amateur first aid. I mean the number of injured who might have got well if they had been left alone but were killed by good but ignorant Samaritans who jogged them around driving the sharp edges of cars into blood vessels or nerve tissue. These figures should be collected.

When dealing with broken bones (unless you are an expert) try to get doctor to the patient before you try to get the patient to a doctor.

Most dangerous fractures are those of the spine and skull. Then very small movements may cause fatal injury to the spinal cord or brain. When the legs are paralyzed the back has been broken. When the arms and legs are paralyzed the neck has been broken. Bleeding from the nose or ears suggests at once a fractured skull. Any person who lies unconscious may have a broken neck or a fractured skull. Do beware!

A first way to move people so injured, if they must be moved without a doctor's supervision:

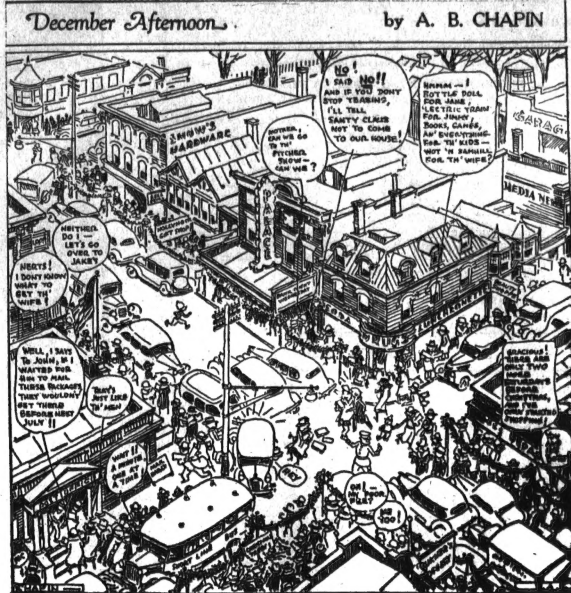

Fractured limbs should be splinted.

A man with a broken back should be laid on his face in a blanket so that his spine curves towards his front.

A man with a broken neck should be edged very gently onto a door so upwards and carried, the army men carry a stretcher, with the man's front and the head behind carefully and deliberately out of step.

Nancy Hart's HOME NEWS

Chestnut stuffing is made two ways. The nuts can be boiled and then they can be coarsely chopped and used without pre-soaking. Sausage often is added to chestnut stuffing, too. Reduce bread crumbs to one-half the amount and add 3 cups of shelled, blanched and soaked chestnuts. Or mash half the nuts and coarsely chop the rest. The chestnuts may be the big French or American nuts.

Here's a gift suggestion for the friend "who has everything." Give her one of the very new "portable" cases. Both beauty and utility are found in this combined vanity and cigarette case which puts an end to impatient groping in the recesses of handbags for scattered cigarette cases and compact. The top and bottom of the porteur-deux is made of a choice of four colors: red, blue, green and yellow. The translucent case knows immediately where the jellied salad or cream is hidden.

And this last year, their patience was rewarded, for normal rainfall came once again, bringing with them bountiful harvests of grain, forage crops and of high quality grain.

This experience has demonstrated to the whole world, in a most dramatic fashion, the remarkable recuperative power of the soil and of the wheat plant, and most particularly the recuperative power of the courageous farmer himself.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Embargo against wheat shipments to the lakehead has been lifted. Winter wheat crop conditions in U.S.A. are still indicated as the worst on record. Great Britain is buying generous quantities of Canadian wheat—Searle reports subsoil reserve moisture prairie provinces very poor—Australian and Argentinean crop threatening less than expected. Following factors have tended to lower price: Canada, Australia and Rumania increase wheat surplus figures.

AMONG THE OLD-TIMERS

REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

Mr. Davy Davidson, of the Buffalo Park staff, was away to Neimlakam, in the south of the province for a few days last week and returned with a beautiful little antelope which has been added to the herd in the National Park.

Mr. O. Lewis, who was getting along nicely, has had a serious set back. His son, Jack, of Jasper, motored down to spend the week end with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Greer are planning to move to town for the winter months and have made arrangements to reside in the Beauty Block.

A former resident in the person of Mr. H. C. King, passed away in England where he had gone on a buying trip from his home in Calgary.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian L.A. held their annual election of officers with the following results: President, Mrs. P. Leppert; vice-president, Mrs. W. Brunker; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. J. Middemaas.

After their regular lodge meeting, the local Rebekahs entertained the Odd Fellows at a social evening. Music and games were enjoyed and the prize winners of the evening included Miss Rodden, Mr. W. Huntingford and Mrs. E. Turner.

Mr. J. Cordingley, hostler at the round house, has made arrangements to move his family here from Biggar. He has rented the Carbert house on Third Avenue east.

While Mr. Armstrong is recuperating from his injured arm and shoulder, Mr. F. Parmenter, of Edmonton, is relieving at the Bank of Montreal.

TEN YEARS AGO

Upon receiving the news of the serious illness of his father, Mr. P. F. Wiley left on Tuesday's flyer for Toronto.

When a gasoline lamp exploded in the farm home of Mr. W. LaFrance, of Gilt Edge, some considerable damage was done before the fire was extinguished.

Mr. James Armstrong, an old-timer of the district, passed away on Tuesday after a lingering illness at the age of 60 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Sid Bibby have taken up residence in their new home on Fourth Avenue west.

Mr. George Hudson left on Sunday to fill his new office in Calgary as organizer and inspector of clubs under the Canadian Legion, B.E.S.L.

The U.F.W.A. and the U.F.A. of Greenshields opened their new hall on Friday, when special speakers were present for the occasion.

Mr. A. G. Smith, superintendent of the Buffalo Park, and his staff are now settled in their new offices in the Federal building.

A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Miss Helen Clifton on Monday evening, in honor of Mrs. Sid Bibby, a recent bride.

EDGERTON

Edmonton must have had some special allure last week. P. S. Pawsey and daughter Elleen started the ball rolling when they went up on Tuesday. Peter Milne went on Thursday and on Saturday at noon Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Davis, Madame Royal, Miss V. E. Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brown all drove up. The latter party returned late Sunday night, with the exception of Madame Royal, who will remain for a week or two.

"Edgertonites" (or Edgertonians?) were given a chance last week to see the new uniforms recently issued to Canadian troops when Pte. J. Scott, of the Edmonton Regiment (formerly 49th Batt.) spent a few days with his brother, T. Scott, manager of the local Co-op. Store. We understand that Pte. Scott was enjoying his last leave before going overseas in the very near future.

The Ladies' Aid of the United church held a sale of needlework and home-cooking on Saturday last in what used to be Joe's Beauty Parlor. Although the quarters were somewhat small for such an affair, it is understood that the ladies were well pleased with the sum realized.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Dale spent a few days in our midst, fitting hither and yon amongst their many friends. We understand that Bob took home an other pair of pheasants to add to those he already has and which, he says, are thriving splendidly. It goes without saying that the birds came from the Pawsey Pheasantry.

We learn that Chris Burton is in the University Hospital and may possibly have to undergo an operation. Treatment is being tried first, however, and it is hoped will bring about satisfactory results.

The popular newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Geoff Miles, gave their wedding dance on Friday night after the show at the local theatre. So dense was the crowd that dancing was reduced to a mere shuffle, and jostling for space was the order of the evening. In spite of that, it was well after 3 a.m. before the affair was concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles, sr., were visitors on Sunday at the home of their son Geoff and his bride.

The weather still remains almost too good to believe, but is very, very easy to take. Long may it continue.

Two local high school students were victims of accidents last week. Philip Pawsey, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Pawsey, suffered a badly wounded ankle during the P.T. period at school on Thursday afternoon. It was at first feared that the limb might be fractured but the X-ray machine at Wainwright hospital revealed only badly torn ligaments. These were securely taped into place and Phil is already hobbling around in fine style.

The second casualty was Bill Gilbert, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gilbert, who sustained very severe burns on both hands and one leg whilst experimenting with phosphorus at his home on Sunday. He is at present under the care of Dr. Aylesworth and it is believed that he will be unable to return to school before the Christmas holidays. We hope he will recover before that, though.

Billy Skene, the affable and obliging mechanic at the Sawyer Garage, disappeared during the week. Now we know why. He returned on Sunday evening with a bride, so here's wishing the newly-weds every possible happiness.

To spend a couple of months with old friends and relatives in Leeds Village, Quebec, Mr. E. Squires left town on Friday.

GREENSHIELDS

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Murray, Edwin and Allen drove to Milden, Sask., early last week to visit relatives.

We are sorry to hear Bunney Bond is on the sick list and unable to attend school.

The Greenshields Go-Getters held their first skating party at Hill's Lake on Monday last. The big bonfire and lingering added to the enjoyment of the 30 young people present.

Miss Mary Hess was a week-end visitor in the city.

While in the city W. C. Jackson exchanged cars and is now driving a Plymouth.

A number of people from Greenshields attended the card party at Gerald School Tuesday night.

The regular Ladies' Aid meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Morrison on December 14th, when a good attendance is hoped for.

Sheepskin Flats

A turkey shoot was held on Tuesday at the farm of Mr. Alvin Johnson.

A number of the young folk of the district attended the card party and dance at Plaxtonville and the dance at Tryangle.

Mr. Bob Roberts left on Sunday morning for Powell River, B.C., to spend Christmas with his brother.

Miss Lucille Shiffet spent Sunday last visiting with Miss Madeleine Biston, of White Cloud.

A skating party was held at the river on Sunday and a large crowd enjoyed the first skate of the season. Mrs. Louisa Tondus and children spent Sunday last with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Tondus.

SYDENHAM

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Johnson and friends motored to Peterborough, Ontario, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Baker and Kenneth Hutchinson were week-end visitors to Edmonton.

A whist drive and dance took place in Sydenham School on Friday last. A number of games of Bingo were played also.

Mr. R. LeBlanc met with an injury on Friday last when a young horse kicked him. Several stitches and the loss of a few teeth was the outcome. We all hope for his immediate recovery.

Skating was the main recreation during the week end. Fine weather made it very pleasant.

HEATH

Heath Young People's Club enjoyed a skating party at Clear Lake on Friday evening.

Mrs. Herbert, sr., was the guest of Mrs. Telford in Wainwright for the past week.

Percy Smith is in the Wainwright hospital with a broken leg, suffered when a horse he was riding slipped and rolled over on his leg.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Leo Mosier, who were married in Edmonton recently. They will make their future home at Heath.

We are sorry to learn of the illness of Mrs. Fred Ford and trust that she will soon be well again.

Chicken pox is prevalent in the district among the younger children.

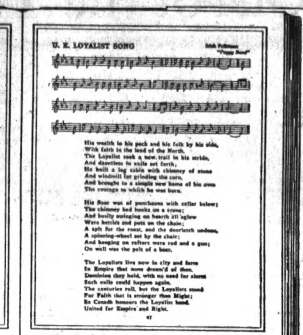

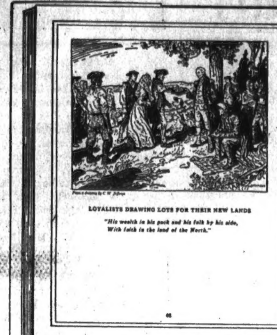

Comedy-Drama Amid Timberland

A playboy's regeneration is worked out in this romance tinged comedy-drama of the timberlands, "Park Avenue Logger". While the action, and there's lots of it, is the principal feature, production detail, particularly the picturization of logging incidents is of high quality, establishing itself as a commercial asset of more than a little value.

As it goes, Grant Curran, gay son of Mike Curran, lumber tycoon, who got his money the hard way, is sent to the tall timbers to see if he can make a man of himself. It happens that Grant is quite a proficient wrestler who enjoys tough going. In the camp, with Peggy O'Shea introduced to carry on the comparatively slight romantic contrasts with the hero, Grant quickly becomes aware that not all is being operated on the up and up. His investigations lead him into numerous action brawls, but in the end he manages to put the skids under the crooked deals that would deprive Peggy and her father Matt of their holdings.

New Songs of Canadian Life Set to tunes from the Old World

Two pages of the new book of Canadian ballads by John Murray Gibson and published by the Ryerson Press, Toronto.

J. M. GIBSON

son Press, Toronto. It is a most attractive little book, beautifully printed and illustrated and for such ballad there is a pleasant singable old tune that Mr. Gibson has dug from somewhere out of the past.

The songs are gathered into ten groups which, in a general way, cover different periods of Canadian history such as "The Pioneers" and "Settlement & Independence", while others sing of mountains, rivers and prairies—Then too, there are ballads of the canoe, of the trail and of the seasons—In short it is a very comprehensive book of Canadian song which should meet with a hearty welcome from Canadians everywhere.

The tunes selected and printed with the ballads are lovely old melodies which have been brought to Canada by settlers from the British Isles and from Europe. Some of these are dance tunes, some are tunes of which the words are no longer generally known or which belong to a language that is not English. Mr. Gibson has written the ballads especially for these tunes.

The writing of ballads is fit old and well loved tunes dates from the time of Shakespeare. When Queen Elizabeth came to the throne of England in 1558, the ballad monger sang at the fair, the words of broadsheets which he sold for a penny. Shakespeare knew them, and in the matches of song in "Hamlet", "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "A Winter's Tale" revealed how much he owed to the ballad singers. Up to the time of Oliver Cromwell, lyric poetry was not yet considered as something apart from music, so we find Christopher Marlowe, Ben Jonson, George Withers, John Donne and Robert Herrick, all great poets, still writing verses to old tunes. Later John Gay took tunes from France as well as England, and we find succeeding poets, including Burns, Scott, Stevenson and Moore writing ballads based on a tune.

New World Ballads is an ideal collection of songs to make the music hour a memorable one in schools and camps as well as in homes.

"Girl of the Turf"

On the Saturday that Red Roamer was to race, Jim called Cary in the morning.

"Everything's going swell," he told her. "Sun Tan was the only real competition we had, but he went lame yesterday in his workout and has been scratched. So you've got everything tied up in a bag, girl. He'll take that going away. You better get a little money down on his nose right away."

"I'd rather not, Jim," Cary said. "Betting's a tricky business. I can't afford to lose a penny, you know." "Say, are you going soft? Here's the chance to pick up some easy dough and you begin to get chicken. Now, listen here. If you're wise, you will put $500 right square on that beautiful nose and be quick about it while the odds are good. He's three to one now. Think what that will be without turning a hand."

Cary did a bit of quick mental arithmetic and the total surprised her. The purse Red Roamer would win wouldn't cover all the bills piled on her desk and the amount she owed Jim, too.

"You draw five hundred out of the bank as fast as you can," Jim went on. "Take it over to that place on Channing street—you remember the place I pointed out to you once."

"You mean a bookmaker?" Cary asked. "Why not the track?"

"Listen. No big-shot bets at the track. The odds are too low. There's nothing wrong with you placing your bet with a bookmaker, is there? You go up and ask for Jake. Tell him you are and he'll fix you up right away. Understand?"

"Yes," Cary said slowly. Once she had seen a bird caught by one wing in a trap. When its desperate flutterings were rewarded with freedom it could not fly again. Its poor wing was torn and mangled beyond repair. But she followed Jim's instructions and wrote a check for $500. Her balance showed only $173. That would not pay the apartment bills for one month.

After the teller at her bank, where she cashed the check, carefully counted out the ten fifty-dollar bills, she walked the eight blocks to the book-making establishment which Jim had recommended, and climbed the marble stairs to the second floor. The door-man let her pass with scarcely a glance and she and herself in a wide long room filled with men and women thumbing through racing forms, talking excitedly in small groups, milling about between large indirectly lighted blackboards and the cages of the ticket makers.

A voice droned over a loud-speaker,

CHAPTER XVI

Cary had never fainted in her life, but moments of utter blackness, of which she had no memory, held her helpless at the rail.

"She looked about her vaguely. The crowd was still there. A group near at hand was loudly jubilant over Candy Man's victory. Figures were coming up on the tote board. A man at her elbow viciously tore up a couple of tickets and said roughly, 'The stewards will sure dust off the owner of that horse. He'll deserve it, too.'"

"He'll deserve it. Cary made a mirthless sound. Little did the man in the gray flannels, who turned to look at her, realize that the tall, pale girl in the spectator sport dress and the black absurd-looking straw hat, who edged away in the crowd, was none other than the owner of Red Roamer. He must have caught something of the sheer misery in her face, however, for she heard him say, 'That finish must have hit some folks pretty hard.'"

Cary wouldn't let herself think. She didn't dare. It didn't make sense to believe that Jim Constance or Bob Graver or anyone else would have given orders that Red Roamer should not win. The loss of the race meant the loss of a fat purse. It meant that Red Roamer would have to wait for his money.

But worse than that, it meant that Cary would have to borrow more money from Jim to carry on. She wouldn't let herself think of the $500 that Jake the bookie had carelessly raked in across the counter that morning, or the bills that waited on her desk at the apartment.

Her first impulse was to get in touch with Anthony. She knew he had seen the race. He had not told her he would be there, but she knew he was. Somewhere in that milling crowd he was elbowing his way round—perhaps frantically looking for her. The thought metered out some encouragement to her as she went toward the back.

As she half expected, she did not find Bob Graves at the stables. A boy was walking Red Roamer around and around. He was suspiciously non-committal.

"Don't know where he is. I just work around here. I ain't supposed to know what the boss does."

He continued his round with the horse. Cary stood dejectedly by for a moment, then turned and walked toward the stables. She would not wait for the stewards to call for her. She would go to them.

She was frightened and nervous when she found herself seated with the three gentlemen whom the man in the gray flannels said would dust her off, but the kindness with which they met her put her at her ease.

"The sort of thing which happened in that race today is the very thing we are trying to weed out of racing, Miss Morgan. It is the sort of thing that gives racing a bad name. Too many people had money riding on Red Roamer today to feel reconciled to the finish. You say you can give no explanation of it?"

"I assure you," Cary said, "that the thing which happened was farthest from my thoughts. I was counting heavily on winning that race today for financial reasons. Losing it was a blow. I am as anxious to clear up this thing as you gentlemen are."

"You have talked with your trainer, or, of course, the jockey?"

"No, my trainer was not at the stables when I went there. However, I'm sure he is not at fault. Winning that race meant pay-day for him. He surely must have understood that."

The stewards did not question her more along this line. Her sincerity seemed to impress them.

"We shall call in Graves and the jockey, Miss Morgan. Of course, as you can plainly understand, this thing must not happen again. It would mean that we would have to ask you to take your horses elsewhere to race them."

Cary knew without further explanation what was meant. She would be ruled off the track—perhaps she would not be able to run her horses on any track in California. Of course she could not afford to take them east. Her brief days of ownership would be flushed and right now she thought it probably would be a good thing.

Still, she couldn't give up so easily—not as long as she owed Jim. She could not bring herself to ask anyone to help her—certainly not Paul or Anthony. She had to do it somehow with the horses.

"You may be certain," she told the men before her, "that I shall do my best to prevent anything of this kind again in my stable. I have to. I was so sure today that my horse would win that I put $500 of my own money on his nose."

"The odds were pretty short to warrant such a risk, Miss Morgan, don't you think?"

"I made my bet with a downtown bookmaker," she said. "Jim Constance advised me to do that this morning, while the odds were good." She was surprised by the change of expression that came into the faces of the three men. Suddenly their manner veered from one filled with almost sympathetic understanding of her bad luck to one of electric tension. They exchanged quick glances. Then one of them leaned forward.

"Tell us, Miss Morgan, how Jim Constance fits into this picture? What connection, if any, does he have with your stable?"

She hesitated for the briefest second. "My mother and I have known Mr. Constance for several years. When I decided to become an owner he lent me money to make my start. He has acted in the capacity of adviser ever since."

Cary sensed that her answer was unsatisfactory—that the stewards knew more about Jim Constance than she did. But she saw by the expressions on their faces that they were not willing or ready to divulge any information about him. They became polite again, even kindly. They asked a few more perfunctory questions, then dismissed her. She went away deeply worried and concerned.

As soon as she could reach a telephone she did the thing that she had been wanting to do all day. She put in a call for Tony.

The DIAL REVIEW

by Walter Dales

The other day a young chap came up to CJCA to take an audition. He had been waiting a long time for an opportunity (there's a waiting list yards long) but he had not been waiting his days just hoping. Consequently, when his chance came, he was miles better than the run-of-the-mill applicants, and his hopes of making good are excellent.

In front of the microphone he had poise, personality, a ready wit, and the ringing sound of authority in everything he said. Right now there is only one hold-up—and that is his somewhat fuzzy voice quality.

No doubt the fuzziness will be soon overcome, because he is now taking lessons from a voice-culture coach (Mrs. Beggs, who also coaches most CJCA regulars at her Birks Building office) and his spare time is spent in listening to good voices.

In fact, after his audition he was handed a list of voices to listen to. The station's production men recommended the voices to him, and I'm wondering how the list compares with your favorites?

Conrad Nagel, heard on Silver Theatre, Sundays, 4.00 p.m., headed the list. Personally, if I detected the plays they present (which I do not) and abhorred the actors that participate in them (they're really swell!) I would still tune in Silver Theatre just to hear the rich, resonant voice of Conrad Nagel. It seems to have the same high quality he claims for the silverware he talks about.

Clifton Fadiman, the question shooter on the Information Please broadcast, to be heard from CJCA starting December 4th, at 9.30 p.m., comes

WOODROW WILSON

He Was Faced With One Of The Greatest Opportunities In History; Yet He Failed Because He Couldn't Handle People

What kind of man was the real Woodrow Wilson? He has been called a supreme genius; he has also been called a magnificent failure.

When Woodrow Wilson sailed for Europe in 1919 he was called the savior of the ages. Bleeding Europe hailed him as a god. Starving peasants bared candles before his picture and offered up prayers to him as though he were a saint. The whole world lay at his feet. Yet when he returned to this country three months later, a sick and broken man, he had alienated many friends and made a hundred million enemies.

History presents Woodrow Wilson as an idealistic school teacher—cold, dignified, and lacking in human warmth. Yet the truth is almost exactly the opposite. Wilson was intensely human—hungry for human relationship—and it was the sorrow of his life that his own shyness kept him aloof and apart.

Woodrow Wilson was probably the most scholarly man who ever sat in the White House, yet he could not read or write until he was eleven years old. His favorite remedy for relaxation was detective stories. Yet his only extravagance was buying beautiful books.

Most of his life he had been poor. His salary as a teacher was so small that his wife painted pictures and sold them to help support the family. As a young professor, Woodrow Wilson couldn't afford to buy good clothes; and later in life, like Lincoln, he cared little about his personal appearance.

And like Lincoln, Wilson was inclined to feed his horse and whatever he fed before him and often seemed to be unconscious of what he was eating.

What kind of man was the real Woodrow Wilson? He has been called a supreme genius; he has also been called a magnificent failure.

Under his frozen exterior, Woodrow Wilson was a man of quick and fierce emotion. Those who knew him said he had a hotter temper than Theodore Roosevelt. His devotion to his first wife was intense and pathetic. One of his first acts after he became President, was to buy his wife a set of table linen. When she died a year later he would not permit her body to be removed from the White House for seventy-two hours. He had it laid on a sofa, and for three days and three nights he would not leave her side.

Probably the greatest flaw in Wilson's character was his lack of tact. The world, as we know it, was a tragic series of broken friendships. He quarreled with the leaders of the Senate. He broke off with his closest friends such as Colonel House. Finally, he alienated many of the people of his own country by asking them to elect only Democrats to office.

When the Senate refused to accept the League of Nations, Wilson appealed directly to the people. His health had always been delicate and his physicians warned him against any additional strain. But he ignored their advice. During the last year of the Presidency, this intellectual genius whose words had once shaken the world, was now so broken and weak that he couldn't sign his name without someone guiding his hand.

After his retirement, people came from all over the world to his house on S Street in Washington—came to it as though it were a shrine. And when he lay dying, pilgrims knelt on the pavement before his house and prayed for the passing of his soul.

President of The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc.

Serving her second term as the only woman secretary of state, Mrs. Earlene White, Governor of New Mexico is carrying on the work which has been done by women of Spanish-American descent continuously since 1923. The reason given for reserving, in a way, this particular office for a woman, is that the office is a comparatively recent members of the electorate, is that more than fifty per cent of the state's population is Spanish-American, and when woman suffrage was granted in 1920 the belief throughout New Mexico was pretty general that Spanish-American women would not take an active part in politics. In the first election after women were enfranchised each party named a Spanish-American woman for the office of secretary of state. Having held the office for so long, they have no intention of relinquishing it. At any rate, so many men have come forward as a candidate.

For her great interest in advancing the Central Kindergarten Normal School of Seoul, Korea, Mrs. Louise Yim, a native of Korea and a graduate of the University of California, has been awarded a distinguished service medal by citizens of her own country. This is considered a great honor for a woman and especially for one in her early thirties. The normal school was organized in 1912 by the Central Methodist Church in conjunction with the Central Kindergarten. Mrs. Yim took charge in 1934 when conditions were not very promising. Debts were wiped out, the school reorganized and moved into new buildings and land has been purchased on the outskirts of Seoul for more buildings.

Thank God for The Red Cross

... Say GREAT WAR VETERANS

National Red Cross War Drive $3,000,000

Veterans of the Great War know what the Red Cross will mean in this war. They know that to every soldier the Red Cross is a sanctuary to which he can look for gentle care and peaceful quiet. To the wounded and sick it means transportation from the scene of strain and strife to the comparative safety of the base hospital. It means the swift, sure hands of the doctor . . . cool sheets and a comfortable bed . . . the kindly Red Cross nurse in her clean white uniform . . . relief, encouragement and cheer. To the convalescent it means the sweet-smelling countryside of England. No wonder that old soldiers who are joining up again say "Thank God for the Red Cross!"

HAVE YOU DONE YOUR SHARE to help this great cause? We who stay at home in the midst of peace must prove to the Red Cross that we are ready to shoulder the heavy financial responsibility that is ours. Delay on our part will be measured in human agony. We cannot, we must not fail! He gives doubly who gives quickly. Give big-heartedly. Don't wait for a canvasser. Christmas Fruit Cake
Even if a more rigid economy has been the rule in the kitchen since the outbreak of war, Christmas is still the big time of the year and will be celebrated as usual. Fruit cake is standard in most homes at this season and the sooner it is made the finer it will be. The flavor improves with aging and by utilizing these days before the hectic rush of Christmas shopping for such pleasurable tasks as making your fruit cake, life will prove less confused in the days to come.

Add eggs, fruits, peel, nuts, honey, molasses and cider. Add flour gradually. Turn into four 8x8x2-inch pans which have been greased, lined with heavy paper, and again greased. Bake in slow oven (250° F.) 3 to 3½ hours. Makes 10 pounds fruit cake.

Social ice melts magically when there are sweets to munch, regardless of whether the eaters are six or sixty. You don't need a chef's skill to produce a handsome array of bonbons. Here are short cut, failure-proof candy recipes made with sweetened condensed milk that are guaranteed to honey the tongue of the most bashful beau.

Chocolate Marshmallow Fudge

REFEERS NEVER AS ATTRACTIVE AS RIGHT NOW

Now's the time to get your reefer here and now! Never was this neat coat so popular, or styled in so many fabrics for schoolgirls and business girls. Here is a grand model in soft tweed of rich golden brown. New and becoming to the right figure is the triple-breasted closing. Also new is the use of black braid for collar, front closing and wrist binding. A double fold like a slot-scan runs from shoulder to hem on each side of the front and in centre of back. Velvet and velveteen are other popular reefer materials.

Modern Christmas Recipes

By BETTY BARCLAY

Wherever Christianity is the prevailing religion, Christmas day is observed. Everyone agrees that it is the finest of all holidays, especially for the children.

Christmas dinner is a gala occasion. It is the high spot of the holiday get-together. Housewives start planning for it days in advance.

Take cranberry sauce, for instance—no Christmas dinner has ever been complete without it. Our grandmothers prepared it at least a week ahead. In those days cranberry sauce, thick with berries, was served in a side dish. Today it may be strained, put into a mold and chilled. The newest and most attractive method is to make it without any cooking, and the addition of orange gives it a new interest. At serving time it comes to the table side by side with the roast, in cubes which adorn the edge of the dinner plate. One of the advantages of this method is that it can be prepared at practically the last minute because quick-setting gelatin requires only an hour to become firm.

Below are the modern versions of cranberry sauce and holiday fruit cakes:

Holiday Fruit Cake (White)
Can be baked three or four weeks ahead
¾ cup shortening
1 cup sugar

4 egg whites
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon cream of tartar baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup water
½ lb. (1 cup) candied citron
½ lb. (½ cup) candied cherries
½ lb. (1 slice) candied pineapple
¼ cup black walnut meats

Cream shortening; add sugar gradually, mixing in well. Add unbeaten egg whites one at a time, beating well between each addition. Sift baking powder and salt with half the flour; add alternately with water to first mixture. Add remaining flour to chopped fruit and nuts; add to cake mixture. Bake in loaf or tube pan lined with heavy oil paper. Bake in slow oven at 350° F.-360° F. about 2½ hours. Makes 1 loaf.

Cranberry Orange Relish
1 package quick setting gelatin (orange flavor)
1 cup boiling water
½ orange
1 tablespoon sugar
1 cup cold water
½ cups uncooked cranberries

Dissolve quick setting gelatin in boiling water; add sugar and cold water. Put cranberries and unpeeled orange through food chopper; add to gelatin mixture and chill until it begins to thicken. Stir up and pour into mold. Chill until firm. Serves 12.

RECIPES as Christmas Gifts

By BETTY BARCLAY

I cannot send gifts to my millions of readers. I cannot even send the popular greeting card. But I have secured some delightful holiday recipes from near and far—and here they are. "Merry Christmas! And may these little recipes make your merry than ever."

Masaroni with Meat Patties
¾ lb. macaroni
12 slices bacon
1 can tomato soup
1 green pepper, finely chopped
¼ lb. veal (or tender beef)
¼ lb. lean pork
1 onion, grated or finely chopped
3 cup butter
Pepper, salt and sage
Have butcher grid very fine the veal and pork into hamburger. Add ¼ teaspoon each of salt, pepper and sage and 1 tablespoon melted butter, mixing well. Form seasoned hamburger into 13 even patties. Fasten slices of bacon around each patty with toothpicks. Place in greased baking dish, and bake in moderate oven 40 minutes.

Add onion and green pepper to tomato soup. Simmer 10 minutes. Cream the flour, a little salt and pepper and 1 tablespoon butter. Stir into tomato mixture. Cook slowly for 15 minutes, stirring to prevent scorching.

Boil macaroni in salted, boiling water till tender. Drain and stir in remaining butter. Place macaroni on hot platter. Garnish it with the patties. Pour sauce over all and serve hot. Makes 4 generous servings. Spaghetti, egg noodles, rice, etc., may be substituted for macaroni in this recipe.

Brazil Nut Stuffing
3 onions
½ cup melted butter
2 cups sliced Brazil nuts
Salt and pepper
Sage or other herbs
3 cups soft bread crumbs
Mince onions and cook two minutes in the butter. Mix Brazil nuts and seasoning with bread crumbs and stir into butter. Cook ten minutes more, stirring constantly. If a moist stuffing is desired, add a "little water." This amount of stuffing is enough for 12.

Cook over medium flame to 237° F. or until mixture will form firm ball when tested in cold water. Stir mixture constantly to prevent burning. Remove from fire, add chocolate cut in small pieces. Add marshmallows. Beat at once until thick and creamy. Pour into buttered pan. When cool, cut into squares.

Cream Cranberry Compote
1 package vanilla
1 rennet powder
1 cup fresh milk
1 cup light cream
¼ cup sugar
1 cup cranberries
¼ cup water

To make cranberry sauce: Boil sugar and water together 5 minutes. Add cranberries and boil without stirring until the skins pop open (about 5 minutes). Remove from fire, and allow to cool.

To make rennet-curd: Follow directions on package, using 1 cup milk and 1 cup cream instead of 1 pint of milk. Chill in refrigerator. When ready to serve, put 1 tablespoon of cranberry sauce on each dish of dessert.

Swedish Cookies
4 cups sifted cake flour
2 cups butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once; measure. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Add flour, a small amount at a time, mixing thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla and blend. Shape into 3 rolls, 1¼ inches in diameter, chill overnight or until firm enough to slice, and cut in thin slices. Or press dough through cookie press. Bake on ungreased baking sheet in hot oven (400° F.) 4 to 5 minutes, or until done. Makes 5 dozen cookies.

Game Hits For Your Party
For everybody who likes to take a chance—and who doesn't?—there's a lively new game called Mexican Pete. You try to roll dice combinations that correspond to numbers on your set of colored cards; the object is to get rid of your cards first. You must shout "I got it!" when the dice click with your numbers, so keep a close eye on everybody else. Americana is an exciting combination of poker and Michigan; and of course, Monopoly and S. S. Van Dine's "Polo" game detective game is always a sure fire hit.

Magic Bonbons
¾ cup sweetened condensed milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
12-3 cups sifted confectioners' (4X) sugar

Blend sweetened condensed milk and vanilla. Add sifted confectioners' sugar gradually and continue mixing until smooth and creamy.

Brick chimneys above the roof should be plastered with lime and cement mixed, and lined with flue lining. The cause of most fires is that mortar has fallen out between the bricks, a heavy wind blows the sparks into the dry paper and shingles on the roof and the upper-part of the house burns before the fire is noticed. All He Wanted Was
A Nice Quiet Life

A nervous looking young man went into a store the other day and sat down for a half hour or so, when the clerk asked him if there was anything he could do for him. He said no, he didn't want anything. She went away and as he sat there half an hour longer, the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous looking man, "I just wanted to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says above all things I must avoid being in crowds. Noticing that you did not advertise in the newspaper I thought this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours of complete isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of cambric to brain him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.
